

LITTLE SUPER DANGEROUS

Little Super Dangerous is Jordan Clermont, Jess Oliverio, Jenna Caspell, and Julian Iafelice, four Calgary musicians who found each other in 2022. The influences are scattered (Dylan, TOTO, Blink-182, Big Thief) but the initials line up.

The band plays introspective indie pop-rock haunted by the ghosts of folk and funk. Their sophomore record Wake-Up Call (2025) is what happens when the whole band writes together, with Jenna singing lead on two tracks, layered acoustics, and harmonies that lock in tight. The songs sit with grief, loss, and the particular talent people have for getting in their own way, and then they hand you a chorus you can sing along to. Their latest release, Vampyr, is a live acoustic and remix EP, and the band can play a stripped-down acoustic set, with piano if needed.

Jess runs Great Bird Studios and mixed Wake-Up Call. Julian holds degrees in composition and musicology from the University of Calgary, moving fluidly between classical ensembles and rock stages. Jenna is a multi-instrumentalist who's been playing since childhood, with time spent in Meadow Drive and Letters From Taylor. Jordan's been a fixture in Calgary's music scene for years, known for spontaneous performances shaped by whatever room he's in.

The band records itself, designs its own artwork, books its own shows, and releases its own music. They've shared stages with Jann Arden, Reuben & The Dark, and Scenic Route to Alaska, with airplay on CBC Radio and CJSW. Wake-Up Call charted at #17 on CJSW in Calgary in 2025, and at #7 on CFBX in Kamloops in 2026.
